Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

Indeed, it demands our careful study and examination. It is not likely that six million aloof and ruggedly ndependent men have come together and banded themselves, into netive unions, societies, farm bureaus, and so forth, for ao sufficient cause.

investigation of the subject conclusively proves that, while there is much overstatement of grievances and misconception of remedies, the farmers are right in complaining of wrongs us endured, and right in holding that it to feasible to relieve their life with beneat to the "rest of the community. This being the case of an industry that contributes, in the raw material form nione, about-one-third of the national ganual weilth production and is the means of divelihood of about 49 er cent of the population, it is obvious that the unbject is one of grave concern. Not only do the farmers make up one all of the nation, but the well-being of the other half depolitcial economy will alm at a inrge degree of national self-sufficiency and self-containment. Rome fell when the pply was too far removed from the helly. Like her, we shall destroy our own agriculture and extend our parces of food distuntly and precarlusly, if we do not see to it that our armers upo well and fairly paid for services. The Yorm gives the nation men na well all food. Cities opulry, but an lm ns unfutclifigence the lower grades of mentality eter will remain on, or seek irnt, unless ngrigaliture is capable of being pursued with contentment and idequate compensation. Hence, to embitfet and impoverish the furmer is to dry up and continuinate the vital ources of the nation

The war, showed convincingly how pendent the nution is on the full oductivity of the turns. Despite renlean efforts, ngricultural production kept only a few weeks or months ahead of consumption, and that only by increasing the acreage of certain staple erops at the cost of reducing that of others. We ought not to forget that lesson when, we peader on the farmer's problems. They are truly common problems, and there should be no attempt to deal with them as if they were purely sellish demands of a cleur-cut, group, untugonistic to of the community. Ruther should we consider agriculture in the light of broad milloud policy, just as we consider oil, coal, steel, dyestuffs, and so forth, ng sinews of national strength. Our growing populademand increasing food supplies, and more wool gotton, hildes, and the rest.
With the disappearance of free or cheap fertile land, additional acreage and increased yields can come only from costly effort. This we need not expect from an impoverished or unbappy rural population.

will not do to take a narrow view of the rural discontent, or to appraise it from the standpoint of yesterday. This is peculiarly an age of flux and chango und new deals. Because 8 thing always bus bren so no longer means that it is righteous, or always shall be so. More, perlmps, than ever before, there is a widespread feeling that all human relations can be improved by taking thought, and that it is not becoming for the reasoning unimai to leave his destiny largely to chanco and natural incidence.

Prudent and orderly adjustment of production and distribution in necordanco with consumption is recognized as wise management in every hasiness but that of furming. Yet, I venture say, there is no other industry in ich it is so important to the pub -to the city-dweller-that production should be sure steady, and in-creasing, and out that the should be in propartion to the need. The unorganized farmers naturally act blind ly and lappilslyely and, in consequence, surfelt and dearth, accompa nled by disconcerting price-variations, herass the consumer. One year polatoes rot in the fields because of excess production, and there is a scurcity of the things that have been displaced to make why for the expansion of the potnto nerenge; next year the punished furmers muss their fields on some other, crop, and politices enter the class of luxuries; and so on. Agriculture is the greatest and fundamentally the most Important of our slump of six billion dollars in the farm yalue of their crops in a single year,

Rather, we should ask if their trouble is not ours, and see what can be done to improve the situation. Parely from self-interest, If for no higher motive, we should help them. All of as want to get back permnaently to "normalcy;" but is it unless our greatest and most hasic industry can be put on a sound and solld permanent foundation? > Let us, thea, consider some of the farmer's grievances, end see how far they ere rent. In doing so, we should remember that, while there have been, and still are, instances of purposeful nbase, the aubject should not be npproached with any general imputation to existing distributive ngencies of deliberately intentional oppression, but rather with the conception that the been modernized.

An ancient evil, and a persistent turned to her home Wednesday. one, is the undergrading of farm products, with the result that what the fartuers sell as of one quality is reportant scale in these days of business integrity would seem almost inwrite, the newspapers announce the suspension of several firms from the New York Produce Exchange for exporting to Germany ns No. 2 wheat a whole shiploud of grossly inferior whent mixed with oats, chaff and the like. · Another evil is that of innecarate weighing of farm products, which, It is charged, is sometimes a matter of dishonest intention and sometimes of prolective polley on the part of the local buyer, who fears that he may "weigh out" more than he "weighs in."

A greater grievance is that at present the field farmer has little or no control over the time and conditions of marketing his products, with tho result that be is often underpold for his products and usually overcharged for marketing lervice. The differ ence between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays often exceeds all possibility of justi fication. To eite a single lilustration Last year, according to figures attested by the rnilways and the growers, Georgia watermelon-rnisers received on the average 7.5 cents for a melon. the railronds got 12.7 eenis for carry ing it to Bultimore and the consumer puld one doller, leaving 79.8 cents for school that the Legislature is planthe service of marketing and its risks, ns against 20.2 cents for growing and transporting. The hard nunsis of fnrm-life are replete with such com mentaries on the crudeness of pres ent arnetices.

Nuture prescribes that the farmer's "goods" must be finished within two or three months of the year, while tinancial and storage limitations gen erally compel him to sell them at the same time. As a rule, other industries are in a continuous process of finish ing goods for the markets; they dis curtail production without loo great injury to themselves or the commu alty; but if the farmer restricts his oalput, it is with disastrons conse quences, both to himself and to the community. The average farmer is busy with production for the major part of the year, and has nothing to sell. The bulk of bls output comes on the mar ket nt once. Because of lack of stor uge facilities and of financial support the firmer cannot carry his goods through the year and dispose of them as they are currently needed. In the great majority of cases, farmers have to entrust storage-in warehouses and elevators-und the unancial carrying of their products to others.

Farm products are generally mar keted at a time when there is a coa gestion of hoth transportation and sell under pressure, and therefore at a disadvantage, but are compelled to take further reductions in net returns. in order to areet the charges for the this sysiem is the best one made for American industries. THE NEW STATE NORMAL.

The bill providing for the establishment of a State Normal in northeastern Kentucky has passed the Senate and will go before the House this week with every indication that it will pass.

The bill provides for the location of the school in the county offering the best inducements, and that means if Morgan county gets behind the effort we can secure the

The Courier can announce that the Board of Education will contribute about 21 acres of land, including the High School campus, and it feels assured that at least $25,000.00 in addition can be raised by local subscription. In fact various sums from $250 up to $1,000 have already been offered.

Morgan county is centrally located, it is the very center of the northeast part of the state. Morgan has the best citizenship of any county in the mountains, has the best school spirit, has no foreign or negro population, no public works to draw undesirable population. West Liberty is a town of exceedingly good morals and there are no temptations for the students.

The drainage of West Liberty is ideal and it is a beautiful place, and an ideal location for a good school. Morgan county is the best agricultural county in the mountains and its citizens are for the greater part prosperous farmers and men of intelligence and progressive-

Morgan county can offer superior reasons and inducements to that of any county in the section embraced in the bill, and all we need to do is to present and fulfil our agreement to the committee who decides the location. Let's get busy and secure the school.

OUR FINANCIAL CONDITION.

Last week we published the financial statement of the county for 1918 and this week begin the publication of the statement for 1919. The expenditures for 1918 were $42,735.39 and the revenue collected that year was $22, 644.63, leaving a deficit of $20,190.76. In 1919 the receipts of the county were $51,240.50 and the expenditures 379,709.47, leaving a deficit of $28,369.17. The deficit for the two above named years was $48,559.93.

We have not received the copy for the years of 1920 and 1921 but unofficial information is that the deficit for the two years will equal or exceed that of the two years given. It is claimed that the total indebtedness of the county will be about $120,000.00.

But be it what it may it presents a problem for the officers in charge. The statutes seem to be plain that the new administration can not assume the indebtedness of the county above the constitutional limit, and yet the inoney was expended for orages and roads mostlythings that the people needed and are getting the bene-

Judge Henry is opposed to repudiating these debts if a way can be found to legally assume those which are

He is very anxious to have the inter-county seat roads finished and to have better roads. The situation is one that is very difficult and the Courier would advise all the citizens to give Judge Henry time to work out the matter and to withhold all criticism until the proper solution can be arrived at. He has a difficult problem and we believe that he will finally arrive at a solution that will be right and satisfactory.

Jim Henry wants to do the right thing in the matter and we trust that the people will not hamper him by hasty 西海北部北部鄉 一年

THE COUNTY PRINTING.

Because some of the citizens do not know what is required in the way of county printing there has been some criticism of the Fiscal court in the contract with the Courier for the county printing. To relieve them of their misapprehensions we will briefly give them the items so they will see that the price has been exceedingly reason-

There are 27 precincts which require 108 ballot books per year, which at the low price of $4.50 amounts to $486. The financial statements, delinquent list, the list of dog licenses will amount to about $500 at the rate fixed by law, and the other publications, notices to overseers, and the other matter that the law requires to be published and fixes the rate for, will amount to more than $250 a year, sa that if these matters were not provided for by contract it would cost the county more.

We make these statements because the facts are that

We make these statements because the facts are that the county has saved money by the contract with us.

The Middlesboro Three-States recently had an account of the discovery by a moonshiner, in a cave of the hones and workmanship of a prehistoric race. Bracelets, jewelery, and other evidence of a highly civilized people are said to have been found. W know that moonshine had the effect of causing the fellow who buys it to see things, but didn't know the fellow who made it drank it.

Owing to the crowded condition of the Courier we will print the rest of the statements in nstallments, printing half a year at a time, but in the final printing all the totals will be brought forward to show the full condition of the county.

Billy Bryan has come to life again and is now touring the country in a lecture on "Enemies of Religion." Now I guess the professors of State who have been teach-"evloution" will begin to be good.

- LSYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Under his grandfather's will, Stanford Broughton, ecciety idier, dnde his share of the ectais, valued at semetring like $440,000, lies in a "nafe repository," intitude and fongitude described, and that is all. It may be identified by the precence nearby of a brownhaired, blue-eyed girl, a plebaid horse, and a foog with a split face, half black and half, white. Stanford at first regards life bequest as a loke, but after concideration sets out to find his legacy.

CHAPPER II.—On his way to Denver, the city nearest the meridian described in his grandfather's wilt, Stanford hears from a feltow traveler a story having bo do with a flooded mine.

CHAPTER III.—Thinking things over, inc-beging to imagino there may be something in his grandfather's bequeet worth white, his idea linaily centering on the possibility of a mine, as a "eafe repository." Recating the narrative on the train, he accertains that his fellow traveler was a mining engineer Charles Bullerton. Bullerion refuses him information, but from other sources Broughton learns enough to make him proceed to Placerville, in the Red desert.

CHAPTER IV.—On the station platform at Atropia, just as the train pults out, stanford sees what appear to be the identical horse and dog described. In his grandfather's will. Impressed, he leaves the train at the next stop, Angels. There he finds that Atropia was or ginally Placerville, his destination. Unable to secure a conveyance at once to take him to Placerville, Broughton selzes a construction cur and eccapes, teaving the impression on the town marchal, Beasiey, that he is slightly demented.

CHAPTER V.—Purened, he abandons the car, which is wreaked, and escapes on foot. In the darkness, he le overtaken by a girt on horseback, and THE dog. After he explains his presence, she invites him to her home, at the Old Cinnabar mine, to meet her father.

CHAPTER VI.—Broughton's hoets are filram Twombly, caretaker of the mine, and his daughter Jannie. Resing the girl stanford is satisfied he has located his property, but does not reveal his identity.

CHAPTER VII.—Next morning, with hram, he visite the mine. Hiram acks itm to fook over the machinary, and he lease so, glad of an excuse to be near feanile, in whom he has become thier sted, and he engages in the first real work he has ever done.

CHAPTER VIII.—Broughton and Hiram set the pumps started, but are unable to make an impression on the water. Butlerton, spherently an eld friend of the fwombiye, vieits the mine. He offere of drain it in consideration of Broughon's giving hm fifty-one per cent of the property. Stanford refueee Then Butteren offers to buy the mine outright for $6,000. If had coet Broughton's grandather more than half a million. Stanford again refueee.

CHAPTER IX.—Jeanie cautione Brough-on against seiling the mine, under any ircumstances, and, apparently in a spirit of miedsef, allows him to kies her. After t conversation with Daddy Hiram, Broughton—decidee he will stick to the CHAPTER XI,-In the morning he finds Guiterton and Jeanie have disappeared, ipparently eloped. He also discovers that his deed to the mino hes been stolen, and as it has not been recorded he has no proof of ownership. Mysterious actions of the die dog cause Hiram and Broughton take the trait in search of Jeanie.

CHAPTER XII.—They find Jeanla's any; abandoned, but no trace of the girl, when they get back to the cabin, Buildron ie there, apparently awaiting their sturn, CHAPTER XIII.—Belleving Jeants to lave gone with Bullerton, the sight of the man is too much for Broughton, and his uces him roughly. Bullerton denies throwing the whereabouts of Jeanle. Broughton orders him off his property, and he dieparts vowing vengeance. Satisfied Bullerton means micchief, Broughton and Hisam fortify themeelves in the mine ebsthouse and prepare for a slege. Butlerton comes with a crowd of desperadoes and on their refusal to vacats, beating an attack.

CHAPTER XIV. During the day and alght the two successfully defend the shafthouse against attacks, including an attempt to drown them out.

Daddy was shaking his head and wringing the moisture—and mnd—out

"Jernsalem-to-gosh, Stannie, we got to take a chance l" he muttered, "Anyways, I'd about as llef dle as he drowaed to death. We'll have to muss that blacksmith shop up and get it out chuckles. "I reckon maybe that's s' the wny, somehow. Chame a match out o' that the box o' your's-if they aln't all soaked to n jiz-whizzlin' sop.' I found the matches, which, luckly, were still dry, and handed him one. Before I fairly realized what he was going to ile, he had taken one of the dynamite curtildges out of its bucket hiding place and was splitting the Tuse with his pocketknife. "Open that there door into the shop," he commanded; and when I obeyed mechanically, ont went the bomb, fizzing and sputtering, to land in a hear of serap Iron piled on the farther side of the stone-hullt forge. The sight of heap of scrap half hypnotized me, I the door held open, until Duddy Illram | jerked me nwny, slammed the door and yelled to me to help him bar it. We had barely time to get the door closed and fastened with the henvy wooden bur und to throw ourselves flat on the lloor behind the bolsting machinery before the crash came. As I have/previously said, the blacksmith that asked for initiative or resource shup was a rather filmsy, shed-like affair, roofed with corrugated iron, and it seemed to us as if broken timhers and pleces of sheet melul were raining down for a full minute after the blast went off.

The shock to everything in the vielnthe stout old shaft-house itself rocked and swayed like a tree in a burriouse, But the walls still stood intact, and when we got up and peeped through a hole which a piece of the llying scrap had torn in the door, we could see whit we had done. It was a plenty. The blacksmith shop had disappenred, leaving nothing but a scatter-Ing of wreckinge. The heavy mivll had been thrown from Its block and the forge fooked as If a glaut had kicked Out by the boller-shed a rack of cordwood and been toppled over unil enemy that mild-mannered, soft-spoken old soldler that I was shut up with would have opened the door and shot the struggler if I hada't stopped him This blowing up of the shop settled the shower-bath business for us definitely. With the impediment out of the way we had a clear view on this third side; could confmand the row of miners' cablas, as well as the bullers in their open shed. When I got through persuading Daddy Hiram that we couldn't afford to marder the wounded, the fellow who had been wrestling with the woodpile had made his exit and there was nobody in Shortly afterward a bullet, fired from somewhere in the forest background, whanged upon our roof and there were several to follow: but aside from punching a few more holes in the Iron they did no harm. "Looks like the 'Hercules' is the one thing they're most skeered of," said Daddy, with his queer little stuttering chuckle. "Now maybe they'll teave us have time to get onrselves dried out a mite."

Totting up the results of the shower bath we'd had, a brend famine promised to be the worst of them. The few cans of beans, tomatoes and peaches -the campers' standbys-were unhurt, of course, and the muddled bucon could be washed with water drawn from the flooded shnft. But the flonr in its sack was merely a blob of paste and was beyond redemption and the cornmeal was the same. In view of the results I wondered if Bullerton hadn't shrewdly ealeulated upon washing our commissary out of existence when he planned his overgrown lawn. sprinkler. But maybe that was giving him credit for more ingenuity than he really had.

Through what remained of the afternoon the rifle firing continued, coming sometimes from one nugle and sometimes from another, but always canally from a safe distance and always

Daddy Hiram, grimly optimistic, extracted a swallow or so of encouragenent out of the persistent pot-shoot-

"Dunno as you've ever noticed it, Stannle, but if you'll only let a ling alone long enough he'll shove himself under the boh-wire fence far enough to get eaught," he sald, "Charley Bulerton, now; he's pluin' forgot that Tropla's less 'n five miles away and that sound earries mighty long distances In these mountuits In clear weather.'

"What difference does that make?" asked.

"It may make a henp o' difference Looks to me like somehody-Buddy Fuller, 'r Jim Haggerty, the section loss, 'r some of 'em down yonder 'd begin a-wonderin', after a spell, what In taraction all this here hinstln' and rifle-poppin' up on old Cinnabar Is a p'Intin' at and come and see." "Do you think the rneket will earry

"It sure will. One night afore "Tropla had gone as dead as she is now, a bunch o' cowpunch's got into an argyment at Blue-nose Bill's place upd we heard the erackin' and poppin' up here-Jeanle and me-like it was just over yonder in Greaser guleli."

"Well?" said I, "If your nephew or any of the others hear it, what then?" low-almed shots tore through the side of the building, struck the Iron frame of the holst, flattened Itself and dropped into the ohl man's lap. Picking up the hot bit of lead to dandle It from hand to hand he went on much as if picking up bullets that were fired at him had been his dally recrention.

"Curiosity killed the eat, Stanling, son. You let some one o' the folks down yonder in 'Tropin say, 'By gol-I wonder what all that shootin's far?' and the next thing you know, somebody'll be morgin' up here to flud out." Along about dusk some member of the besieging party tried to make a reconnaissance. I happened to be keeping the lookout on the cubin shie of our fortress and saw a man dodging among the pines back of the house. When I reported to Daildy be took a snap shot at the place I pointed out to him and there was a wild yell nul n stir in the young plues as though a hog were galloping through them. "Just to let 'em know that we're still alive and kickin'," said the old man, with another of his quavery what they was almin' to find out."

Possibly It was. At all events, the rifle lire stopped with the coming of darkness, and as we freed our second night of defense we had plenty of time to sit around and think and speculate upon what the outcome was going to Taking it all in all, it was the funtastle humor of the thing that hit me hardest. Six short weeks curiter peo ple at home had been culling are all the hard names that full to the lot of with enough inheritance money to keep him in ties and shoes and shirts and It smoking and spitting sparks in the to buy gas for his car-though that last asked for a good blt on the rising guess, for I stood gaping at it, with east of gasoline-and not enough to make life, or unything connected therewith, very much warth while.

Also these same people were saying -behind my back, of course, but there were always plenty of them to repent the saying to my face-that I was good stock gone to seed, would never amount to a hill of beaus in anythin; fulness, or primitive rough sinff of any surt; that I was due to go on dolling myself up and playing skittles to the end of the chapter-which would probalby stage itself in our asylma for the feelsle-minded. Also, again, at that same time, which was six weeks--or ity was, of course, tremendous and six thousand years-ago, I was enguged to Lisette; with mighty little prospect of marrying her, to be sure, > hody else, . I looked around at And new . the shadoxy walls of the grim old Clnunbar sluft-house, fooming darkly and still d eplng, itck, tuck, from their gy clothes; stured across at Daddy Illium sitting bucked up against the other name for it I broke out in a story.)

but with no thought of marrying anymnn dryly. "I allow you ala't goln tu he close-fisted enough to keep a good joke all to yourself in no such a hoedown as this."

"I'll try," I sald, and dld It the best I knew how, giving him some idea of the life I had lived and its earthwide, abysmal difference from the experlence of the past six weeks, Slience for a time and then:

"Book-learnin' and good clothes and eatin' with a flat fork 'r' all right, Stubnic, but they don't make the man n'r the woman; there's got to be somethin' inside; somethin' a heap bigger than any o' them things."

"Quite so," I admitted. Another slience and at the end t the old philosopher again: "You heen sort o' sore about my Jeanle, since yesterday . . . She's heen eatln' your gran-paw's bread, like me, and you thought, and I thought, that she might at least 've walted a little spell afore she run off with Charley Bullerton. Maybe we've been juntuln' at things too sudden, Stanale. What made her ride 'way up yonder to Grenser sldin' to catch that train? And how come Charley Bullerton to marry her one day and be up here with his bunch o' gunmen by daybreak the nex' mornin'?"

"Has Jennile friends in Angels with whom she could be staying?" I asked. "Not a single soul. He'd a-had to leave her at the Chink's hotel; and that nin't no place for a woman, married 'r t'otherwise."

"But supposing they didn't go to Angels?" "There nin't no other place they could go and let hilm get back, as you night say, in the same day." "Say" It all, Duddy," I prompted. "There aln't much to say, Staanle, boy, geetin' what I said afore, that muybe we'd been jumpin' at things sort o' blind-like. Jennnie's got a heap of sense—it I do say it as shouldn't—and the whole gee-ripittia' thing, as we been puttin' it up, ain't no more like her thun winter's like dog-days." her than winter's like dog-days." Having run the subject into a corher we were both speechless for a litle thue and I think it was almost with n sense of relief that we sprang alert when the dog, hitherto sleeping quietly at our feet, jumped up and ran to hold his nose at the threshold of the door opening upon the dump head.

CHAPTER XVI

Burnt Matches. Following the dog to the door, we could neither see nor hear anything going on outside, though Barney's snillings uader the door and his luw growl warned us that something was afoot, either on the dumn head or in the partly wrecked cable beyond. While we were still peeping and peering, ench at his auger-hole and each ready to take an offhand shot at anything that seemed suspicious, the sitence of the mountain night was ripped and torn by the most bideous elamor lmaginable, arising, apparently, in the eablir or nerhaps from the groving of trees just hehlnd it. The racket was denfening; comparable to nothing that I'd ever heard; a magulfied orchestration, so to spenk, of the pundemonium unde by a crowd of country boys serenading a newly married pair with tin pans .nml such-like noise-making implements.

"What lu the name o' Josh!" stuttered Daddy Hirnan, "Reckon them gosh-dummed plrateers 've gone plum'

"Wnlt," I qualified, and I had to shout to make myself heard, "There'll he more to follow. This is only the curtain-raiser." But my guess appeared to he no good. For quite some little time we crouched, guns at the rendy, prepared to repel the assault which we natural ly supposed would be made under cover of the distracting racket. But there was no assault, though the meaningless clamor kept up without abate-By the time we were beginning to grow a trille hardened to it the clamor stopped as abruptly as It had begun and the stlence which succeeded was ven more denfening than the noise and been. While I fancled I could see llm lighres stenling down the road but led to the beach below, I heard Daddy say: "Now, what lu the name ' Jeholachlm-" He had turned away from his peephole and I could sense, rather than see, .ta. he was rubbing his eyes. Then I test'zed mat upon me, also, a sudden billiadness and fallen; the interior of the shafdouse had become as dark as the hislde of a pocket. The effect was so stupefying that It took both of us a minute or so to understand that some change as yet undefluible had been wrought either in us or in
